Technology is great! We can do many tasks in a shorter amount of time and with greater ease that we could have done those same tasks just a few years ago. However, with that technology has come a threat of inconvenience and data theft. I personally marvel at the audacity and malice of someone who would write computer programs (viruses) to erase or destroy someone else's data. Such activity is called "hacking."

I also am amazed by the ability of hackers to manipulate and expose the private emails and other information of someone else. Yet that is exactly what has been done recently to Colin Powell, former Secretary of State.

You may have seen the stories—not only were some of his mundane and routine emails exposed to the world, also some private comments about other people, namely Donald Trump, Hillary Clinton and Bill Clinton. The "newsworthiness" of this hack is that the comments were very negative toward the above people (in one case, very vulgar) and were embarrassing to Mr. Powell upon their release.

With this hacking and the very public and extended exposure of Mrs. Clinton's emails, many people in Washington, D.C. are nervous and worried that their personal comments might be made public. One person interviewed about the hacking said that he was anxious about his emails and others were even halting their use of email because of the danger of the release of inappropriate comments. He was quick to add that there was nothing of his that would be wrong, just inappropriate.

It brings up some interesting questions, doesn't it? What if someone hacked your emails—would they see "inappropriate comments" and bad language? What if someone hacked your Facebook page? Would someone close to you, who does not use Facebook be ashamed at what is on your page? What if someone hacked your phone? Would they see inappropriate texts and pictures? Is your privacy valued above godliness?

Don't forget that God sees all and knows all (Proverbs 5:21) and one day will judge us (Romans 14:12; 2 Corinthians 5:10).

A Pause . . .And Reflection

Our financial seminar “My God and My Money” with Jim Gardner was excellent! Despite the many things that were going on and vied for our attention, several were able to be present for the weekend sessions and our service Sunday. As always, Jim was very efficient and helpful in his messages. The lessons have been uploaded to our website and are in the video archives. Encourage your family and friends to watch as well.

The “Great Debate” is coming up Tuesday, September 27, on the campus of the Ohio State University. It will involve our brother Ralph Gilmore and atheist, Alexander Rosenberg. Rosenberg will affirm that the existence of suffering in this world rules out the existence of God. Gilmore will deny that premise and argue for the existence of God.

In an email, Ralph told me he is ready for the debate and appreciates this church and all that we have done for him. He is feeling well physically, following the cancer surgery of six weeks ago.

The debate will be streamed online and you can come to the church building to watch on the big screen if you like. The debate will begin at 5:30 CST. (You might want to bring a lawn chair or something similar to place in the auditorium, because the debate is three hours long.)

Of course, you can stream it at home: www.WARRENCENTERLIVE.com

I hope you have a great week.—Lance

Giving Thanks for Interruptions

My dad used to tell a story about a conversation his dad and his uncle had out in front of the house on Morrison's Creek in Jackson County. It seems that one of Uncle Demmon's sons kept trying to interrupt the adult conversation—a practice that was simply not tolerated in that day. After a while they noticed another of the boys was missing, only to discover that the child had been trying to interrupt to inform the adults that the younger boy, Oliver, had fallen off the back of the buggy while they were coming down Backbone Hill.

Interruptions are a part of life. While many of them are annoying or symptoms of rudeness, others can offer significant opportunities for growth. It all depends on how well we are “listening”.

Losing a job certainly “interrupts” one's career track, but it may cause a reevaluation of where that track was headed. Having someone come for help may alter a well planned schedule, but it may provide a chance to minister in the name of Jesus. Having children interrupt a home repair project may delay its completion, but may offer a great teaching and bonding experience for the family. Being stuck in a traffic jam might just keep you from being in a serious accident farther down the road.

The next time we face an interruption in our DayPlanner, we need to pause long enough to see the blessing and opportunity that is revealed. Then, we can thank God for the interruptions. —Don Loftis
